Find Your Next Book

WEBSITE PROPOSAL – LITERACY ORGANIZATION

A low-pressure book discovery site for young adults who don’t think of themselves as readers.

Prepared by Websigners Studio – October 2026

Problem Statement

Many young adults believe reading is not for them. School assignments, long “must-read” lists and a bookish culture can make a first step feel like a test.

01

Wrong First Impression

Reading can feel like its homework or a chore, so interest never gets a chance. Not knowing the books to read and genre specifications.

02

Too Much Choice

Endless lists with no starting point stop newcomers and readers before they begin.

03

Not Seeing Themselves

Few recommendations connect to what they already enjoy. Need more ways to find their liking and bring them closer to their interests.

Proposed Solution

A friendly site that starts with what you already like, not with a book list. Pick a few interests, get a short set of picks you can try today.

01

Interest-first Picker

Choose 3 interests or moods and see a small, curated set of books.

02

Make Choices Easier

Use friendly book cards with a short description , reading mood approximate length, and a clear next step.

03

Welcome Every Reader

Use plain language, readable type, accessible contrast, and reassuring messages that there are other ways to reading. Graphic novels, audiobooks and short reads count, so no format feels wrong.

Scope and Deliveries

Five core pages, using a shared design system to keep the project on schedule.

Home – Clear welcome, interest/featured picks, and “start Exploring” links.	01
Explore– Browse by genre, mood, format, or reading time/amount of pages in book.	02
Book Details – Reusable book detail layout with information/descriptions.	03
Starter Guide – Tips and tricks for new readers to get into reading without requirements and rules.	04
About & Resources – organization mission and about info, curated links, and contact information.	05
